INTRODUCTION

World Hearing Day (WHD), observed each year by the World Health Organization (WHO) on March 3, provides a global platform to raise awareness about hearing-related issues, highlight the impact of hearing loss on individuals and communities, and draw attention to the public health challenges surrounding ear and hearing care.

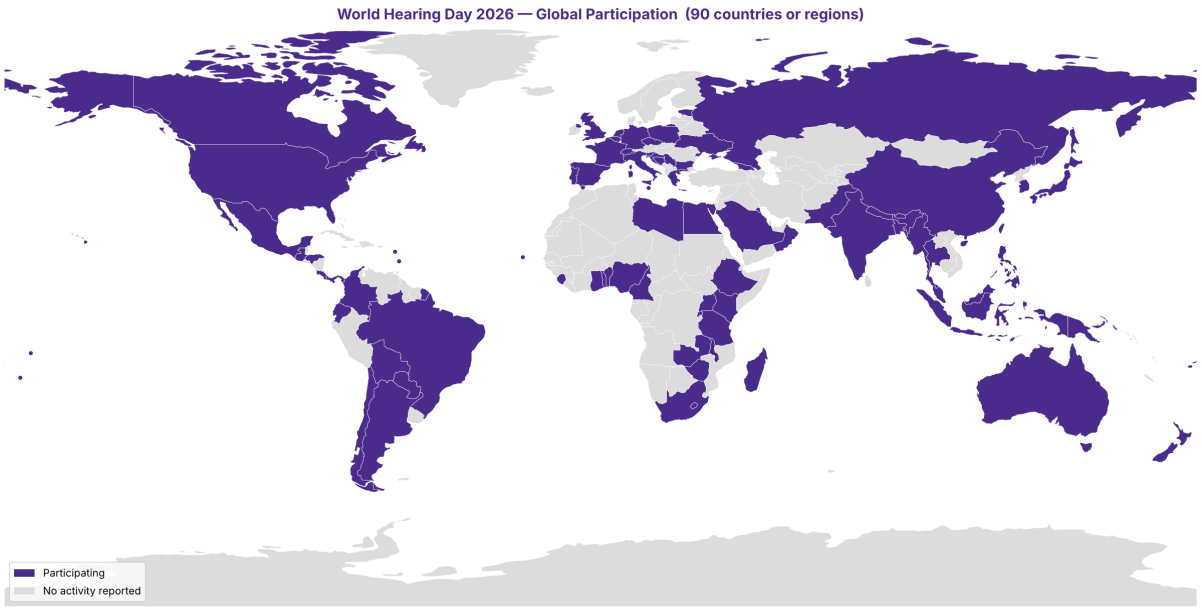

The 2026 global theme, "From Communities to Classrooms: Hearing Care for All Children," emphasized the critical importance of preventing avoidable childhood hearing loss and ensuring early identification and care for children with ear or hearing problems. Schools and communities were highlighted as natural entry points to reach children, parents, and teachers — integrating hearing care into school health and child health programmes to help children hear, learn, and succeed.

WHD IMPACTING LIVES

The following stories, drawn from activities across all regions, illustrate the real-world impact of World Hearing Day 2026 on individuals and communities around the world.

TNAI — India

During the World Hearing Day activities conducted in a government school in rural Jalandhar, a class teacher recognized early signs of hearing difficulty in a student after attending the awareness workshop. The student was frequently inattentive and struggling academically. Following guidance from the session, the teacher informed the parents and encouraged medical evaluation. The child was diagnosed with an ear infection and received timely treatment. After intervention, the student's hearing improved, classroom participation increased, and academic performance showed positive change. This experience highlighted the importance of teacher awareness and early identification in preventing long-term hearing-related challenges.

MED-EL Elektromedizinische Geraete — Sierra Leone

During the World Hearing Day activities in Freetown, several children and young people with hearing loss received hearing aids as part of the donation programme. One school child had been struggling to follow conversations and lessons because of undiagnosed hearing loss. During the screening activity she received a hearing test and was later fitted with hearing aids by the ENT team. With the hearing aids she was able to hear voices and sounds more clearly. This makes it easier to follow what teachers say in class and to take part in conversations with friends and family.

The National Center for Disability Research and The Libyan Hearing Ambassadors — Libya

When her parents initially refused consent for the school's hearing screening, this first grader quietly insisted that she wanted "to check her ears just like her friends". School staff and campaign team were waiting till the end of the school day when her father arrived to pick her up to check her hearing, the last but not least! Her simple honesty and determination made her parents change their minds and agreed to let her take part in the screening event, realizing that even young children can advocate meaningfully for their own well-being.

Ear and hearing problems are commonly seen at our clinic. After completing the two-day workshop, I feel more confident in my skills to help people who come to our clinic. We see a lot of adults and children with impacted earwax, and I am happy we can now do something for these patients in our clinic rather than refer them to the ENT Clinic at the main hospital. Travel can be difficult for many patients. I also feel more confident now in recognizing urgent cases. I really enjoyed the training, especially the role-playing scenarios were a lot of fun!

World Hearing Day campaign 2026 organised by BVHI had a significant impact in Germany , particularly in the digital sphere, reaching more than 2 million people through various social media channels. Traditional media coverage played a key role in raising awareness: over 33 million readers were reached in print and online media. Regional daily newspapers covered the topic extensively. Nearly 1.23 million listeners were reached via radio. On TV, over 800,000 viewers watched segments on World Hearing Day, including on SWR's Landesschau and on HR's "Die Ratgeber." Politicians created posts on social media, such as Nina Warken, German Minister of Health.

Report of Activities at WHO - Overview

World Hearing Day (WHD) 2026 was observed on 3 March 2026 under the theme From communities to classrooms: hearing care for every child. WHO marked the day through staff-facing activities at headquarters, regional and country office events, and a global social media campaign of 26 posts across seven platforms.

Key messages centered on children: 95.1 million children aged 5–19 live with hearing loss, over 60% of childhood hearing loss is preventable, over 1 billion young people are at risk from unsafe listening, and over 80% of ear and hearing care needs remain unmet. WHO called for early identification and referral, school-based hearing screening, empowering parents, teachers and health workers, and cross-sector partnerships.

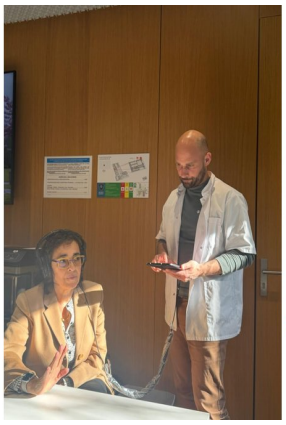

WHO headquarters in Geneva, together with WHO regional and country offices and organizations from 90 countries, organized a series of events and outreach efforts to raise awareness, advocate for policy development, and empower individuals and communities to protect children's hearing health.

WHO headquarters:

HQ activities focused on reaching WHO's own workforce and their families.

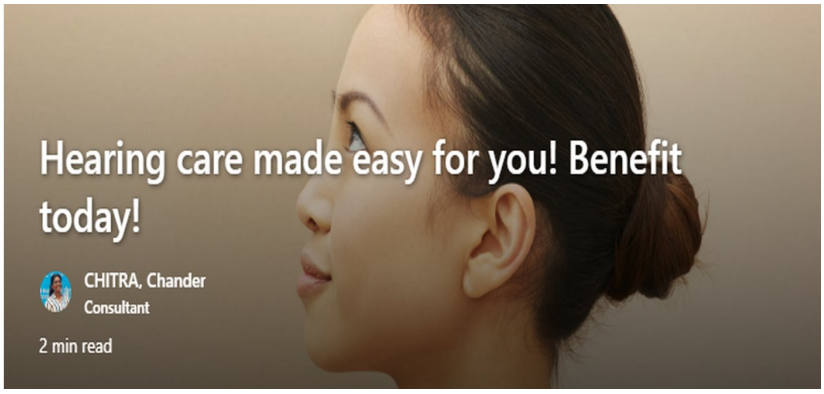

Hearing screening and ear and hearing care booth. In collaboration with Staff Health and Insurance, over 100 WHO workforce members and their family members were screened, including restaurant and building staff. A booth answered staff questions and promoted safe ear care practices.

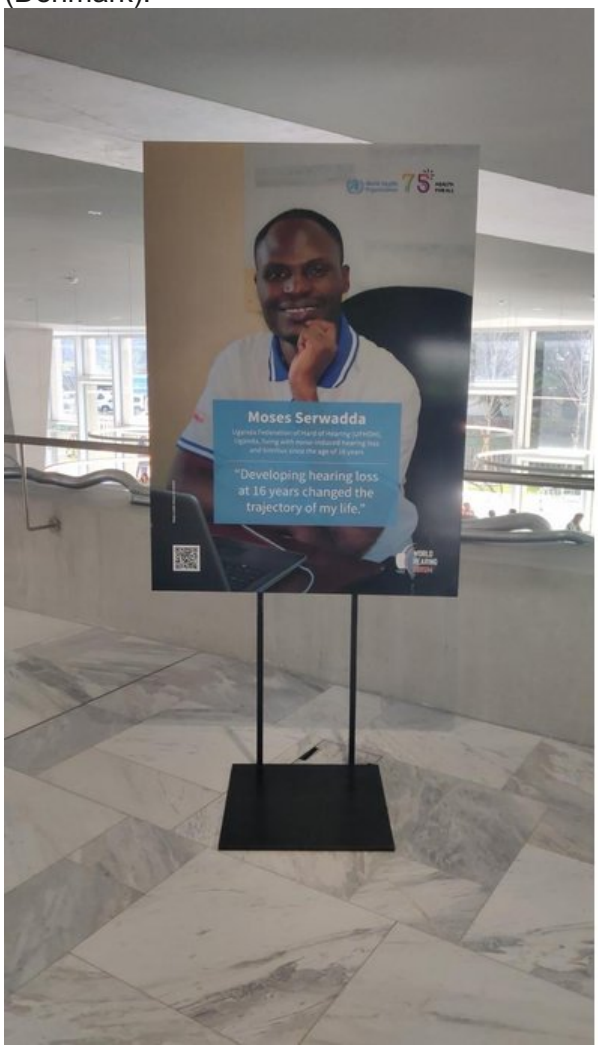

Ask the Expert session and OneWHO article. Hearing made easy for you and your family (4 March, 11:00–11:45 CET) was led by Dr Carolina Der Mussa, Technical Officer, WHO Hearing Programme; workforce from regional, country and HQ offices participated. A OneWHO intranet article, Hearing care made easy for you! Benefit today!, promoted the offer to staff.

Screensaver, digital screens and photo exhibition. A global screensaver raised internal visibility of WHD. Digital screen displays and a photo exhibition showcased what access to hearing care can achieve, including a portrait of Kasper Bergmann, Vice President, World Federation of the Deaf (Denmark).

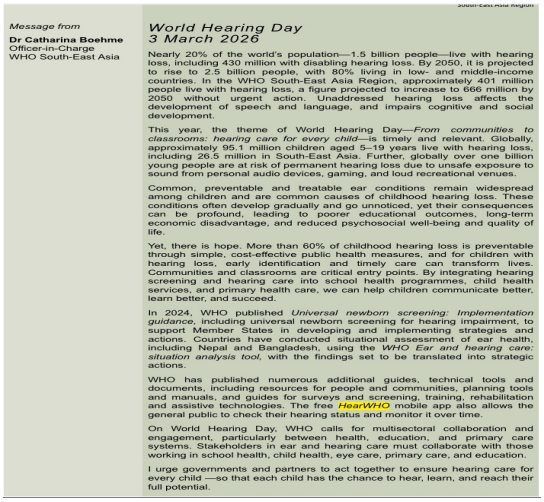

Regional and country offices:

WHO South-East Asia Regional Office (SEARO)

Officer-in-Charge Dr Catharina Boehme issued a WHD message noting that approximately 401 million people in the Region live with hearing loss (projected 666 million by 2050), including 26.5 million children aged 5–19. It referenced situational assessments in Nepal and Bangladesh using the WHO Ear and hearing care: situation analysis tool and called for multisectoral collaboration across health, education and primary care.

Message from

World Hearing Day
3 March 2026

Nearly 20% of the world's population—1.5 billion people—live with hearing loss, including 430 million with disabling hearing loss. By 2050, it is projected to rise to 2.5 billion people, with 80% living in low- and middle-income countries. In the WHO South-East Asia Region, approximately 401 million people live with hearing loss, a figure projected to increase to 666 million by 2050 without urgent action. Unaddressed hearing loss affects the development of speech and language, and impairs cognitive and social development.

This year, the theme of World Hearing Day—From communities to classrooms: hearing care for every child—is timely and relevant. Globally, approximately 95.1 million children aged 5–19 years live with hearing loss, including 26.5 million in South-East Asia. Further, globally over one billion young people are at risk of permanent hearing loss due to unsafe exposure to sound from personal audio devices, gaming, and loud recreational venues.

Common, preventable and treatable ear conditions remain widespread among children and are common causes of childhood hearing loss. These conditions often develop gradually and go unnoticed, yet their consequences can be profound, leading to poorer educational outcomes, long-term economic disadvantage, and reduced psychosocial well-being and quality of life.

Yet, there is hope. More than 60% of childhood hearing loss is preventable through simple, cost-effective public health measures, and for children with hearing loss, early identification and timely care can transform lives. Communities and classrooms are critical entry points. By integrating hearing screening and hearing care into school health programmes, child health services, and primary health care, we can help children communicate better, learn better, and succeed.

In 2024, WHO published Universal newborn screening: Implementation guidance, including universal newborn screening for hearing impairment, to support Member States in developing and implementing strategies and actions. Countries have conducted situational assessment of ear health, including Nepal and Bangladesh, using the WHO Ear and hearing care: situation analysis tool, with the findings set to be translated into strategic actions.

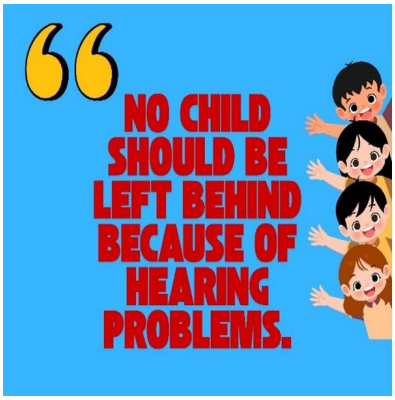

WHO has published numerous additional guides, technical tools and documents, including resources for people and communities, planning tools and manuals, and guides for surveys and screening, training, rehabilitation and assistive technologies. The free HearWHO mobile app also allows the general public to check their hearing status and monitor it over time.

On World Hearing Day, WHO calls for multisectoral collaboration and engagement, particularly between health, education, and primary care systems. Stakeholders in ear and hearing care must collaborate with those working in school health, child health, eye care, primary care, and education.

I urge governments and partners to act together to ensure hearing care for every child —so that each child has the chance to hear, learn, and reach their full potential.

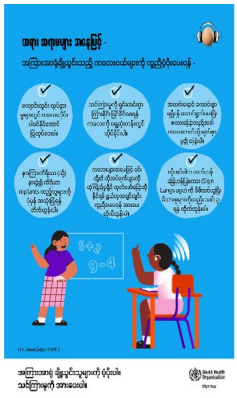

WHO Myanmar country office

The office translated the communication toolkits (Myanmar and English) and shared them on Facebook and LinkedIn. Materials went to partners, including those running activities at homes for the aged, and to the Ministry of Health Ear and Hearing Programme, which held activities at a school. The SEARO OIC message was also posted on the WHO Myanmar Facebook page.

WHO Armenia country office

Over 50 participants from the UN and WHO Armenia were screened (12–13 March) using the WHOears tone-based digital app, and WHO materials were translated and adapted into Armenian. A Sensory Care National Workshop raised awareness, identified gaps and explored actions to improve hearing services. Partners: Armenia WCO, WHO HQ, DHS division / HWD (post).

WHO Regional Office for Europe

Shelly Chadha (WHO) and Shirin Kiani (WHO European Office) presented the WHD 2026 theme at a European Parliament lunch debate, From school to workplace, with partners including the European Federation of Hard of Hearing People (recording).

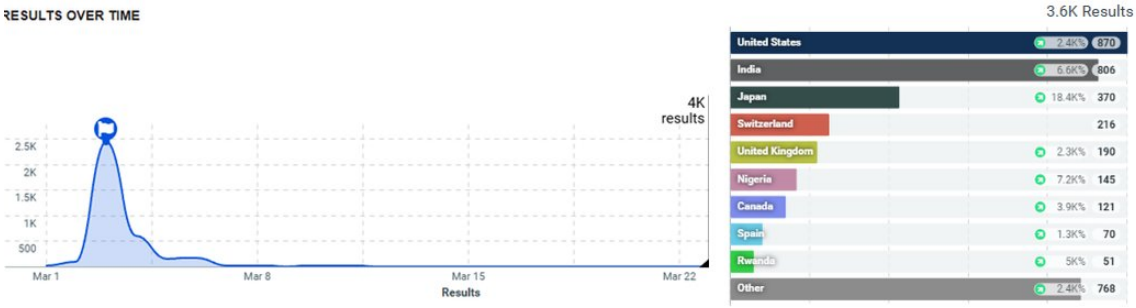

Global social media campaign

WHO published 26 posts; the campaign met its success targets on X and TikTok and performed similarly to 2025 overall, except on Facebook, where the 2025 target had been met.

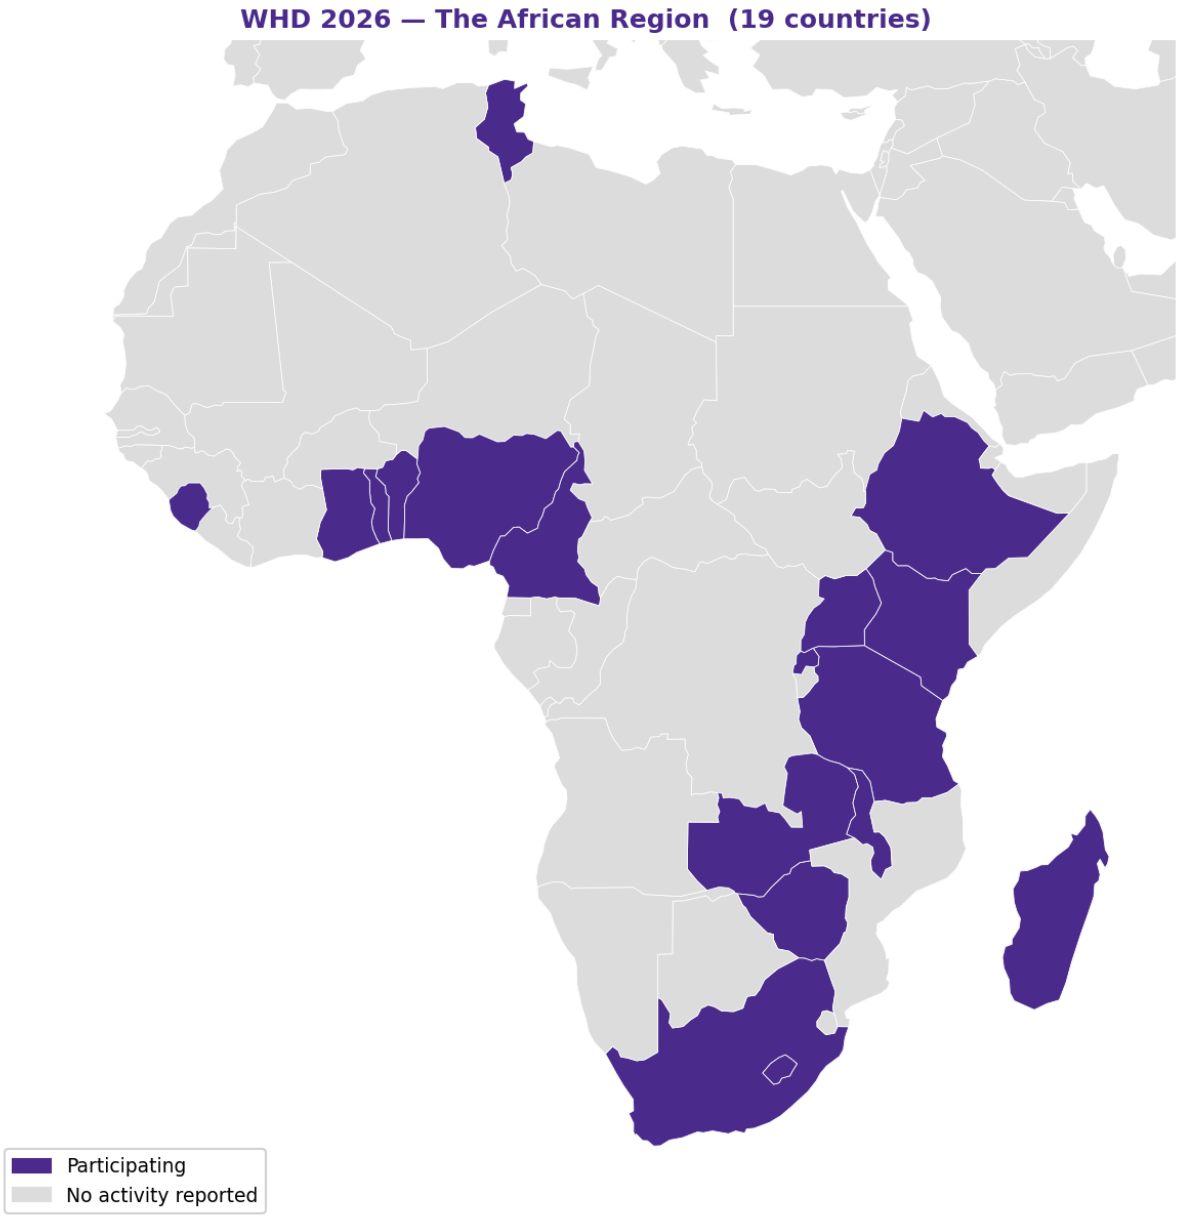

Platform	Posts	Result
X	8	565K impressions; top post 436K impressions
TikTok	1	10.5K views
Facebook	4	923 shares total; top post 354 shares
Instagram	4	721K views, 460K reached, 5.6K likes
LinkedIn	4	290 shares; top post 99 shares
BlueSky	4	94 reposts, 301 likes
Threads	1	51 likes, 5 reposts

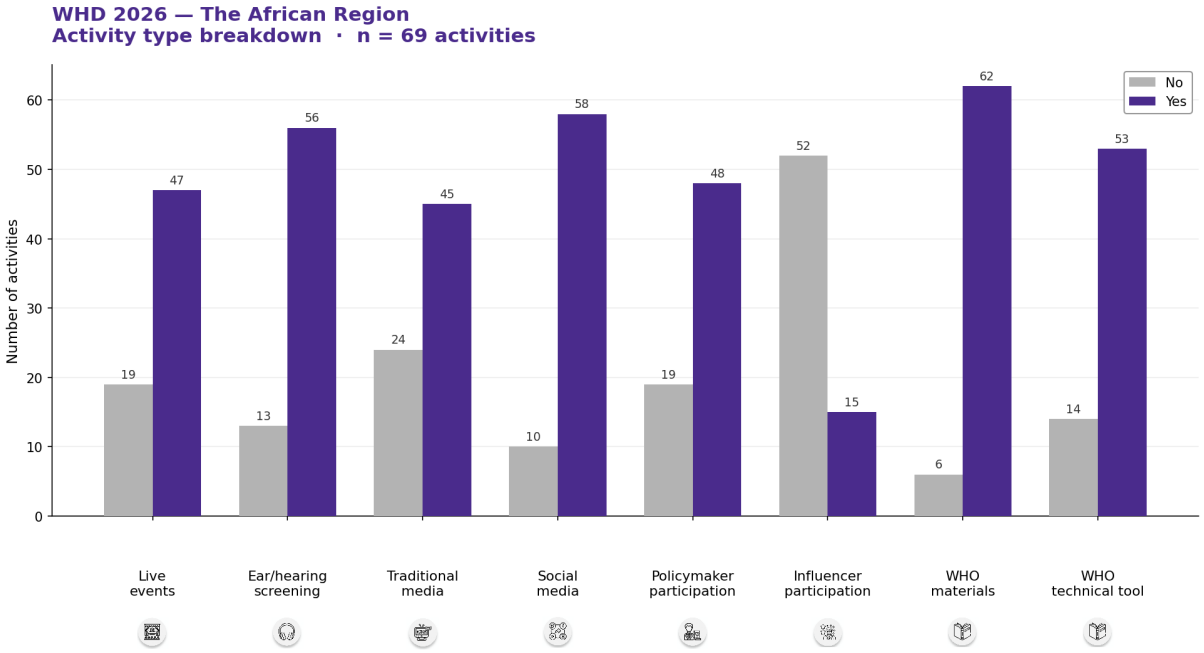

The Daily Dose video on Facebook ranked fifth among all WHO videos in March by shares, and the top X post outperformed 2025's best post on impressions and reposts. The #WorldHearingDay hashtag generated 3.6K results, 73.6K engagements and 307.8M people reached; leading countries included the United States, India, Japan, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. Sentiment was 39.4% positive, 34.4% neutral and 26.2% negative, with positive themes on early detection, communication and support for children; comments flagged that access to interventions remains low.

Impact Stories

Abeng Egbe Ear, Nose and Throat (ENT) Foundation — Nigeria

During the ear screening process for the primary school pupils, the school Proprietor requested that the team should please review an old staff that was hard of hearing. After evaluation, he was diagnosed of bilateral conductive hearing loss from wax impaction. Softening of the wax was done with olive oil and he subsequently had bilateral aural syringing with complete resolution of the hard of hearing.

ASSOCIATION OF ENT CLINICAL OFFICERS (U) LTD — Uganda

One notable strength was the successful treatment of an 8-year-old girl who had inserted beads into her ears four years earlier, resulting in prolonged hearing loss. Specialists at the camp carefully removed the foreign bodies, allowing her to regain her hearing after years of impairment. This case exemplifies the life-changing potential of accessible ENT care and reinforces the importance of early intervention for children.

Bethel-Goshen Clinic — Ghana

During our screening exercise in a school and within the community, foreign objects such as pieces of eraser, small sticks, and tiny stones were discovered in the ears of three children. It was reported that one of the children among the three had been having difficulties with hearing. The discovered objects were safely removed at our clinic, after which the children received the necessary treatment. In addition, they were educated on the dangers of inserting objects into the ear and how to protect their hearing.

Benemérito Comité Pro-Ciegos y Sordos de Guatemala — Guatemala

Jazmín, aged one year and ten months, was born with congenital hearing loss. Her parents, a hardworking family in Guatemala City, sought support early and connected with the Benemérito Comité Pro-Ciegos y Sordos de Guatemala. Through its holistic programs, she received specialized care, rehabilitation, and guidance. Due to financial constraints, hearing aids were out of reach—until strategic partnerships made them possible. Today, with assistive devices, early stimulation, and speech therapy, Jazmín is strengthening her development. Her story highlights how partnerships are essential to expand access, transform lives, and help break the cycle between disability and poverty.

AEA European Association of Hearing Aid Professionals — Throughout the European Region

In the last lunch debate, the topic was already related to the impact of hearing loss and hearing care on employment. This resulted in a joint project by EFHOH (European Federation of Hard of Hearing People), AEA (European Association of Hearing Aid Professionals) and the Audiology department of the Thomas More University College in Antwerp, to launch a survey for Hard of Hearing People who are or were active on the workfloor. We have noticed that we all need to step up, to take empowerment more serious, to better inform and support hard of hearing people better to be successful.

Asociación de Implantados Cocleares de Cantabria — Spain

Thanks to the use of assistive devices like FM systems and the dedicated support of AICE Cantabria, cochlear implant users in Cantabria are breaking communication barriers. These technical aids allow members to actively train their listening skills in real-world environments. By providing full accessibility—even in challenging acoustic spaces like the city's historical Air Raid Shelters—we ensure that everyone can fully engage with their local history. Technology and community support transform hearing loss into an opportunity for active participation and lifelong learning.

The Power of Persistence: A Turnaround Story The awareness event began with empty chairs and sceptical police under a sweltering afternoon sun. Refusing to give up, our troupe used drums and music to attract passersby, quickly drawing a large crowd. Soon the venue was packed with energy. A renowned theatre celebrity stopped to watch and later offered praise and a thoughtful speech. The audience joined quizzes enthusiastically, and artists from nearby exhibition created paintings for WHD. Despite exceeding our time permit, police quietly stayed back, enjoying the event. What began in silence ended as a triumph of community involvement.

As a physician specialising in phoniatrics, paediatric audiology and otolaryngology, I prepared expert reports on children, adolescents and young adults with normal peripheral hearing but auditory processing disorders or listening difficulties associated with learning difficulties, dyslexia and autism spectrum disorders. Many were fitted with assistive listening devices or low-gain hearing aids. I observed their progress towards greater social participation and improved academic achievement. These experiences motivated me to pursue research in this field and to support access to appropriate technical hearing assistance. I aim to raise public awareness of the needs of these individuals and the benefits of timely intervention.

Small Grants Awarded

The WHO and the Coalition for Global Hearing Health (CGHH) offer support to institutions/individuals to observe WHD by reducing financial barriers and assisting the organization of WHD activities across regions through the WHF-CGHH Small Grants programme. Organizations hosting WHD are encouraged to apply for a grant of up to USD $800 to help cover costs for organizing a WHD event. This endeavor continues to empower stakeholders in building lasting impact in their communities by furthering messages of ear and hearing care. Approximately 30 organizations are awarded with a small grant yearly.
